Romanledmond (Sam) and Carmineledmond (Vince) meet. In the town of Lacette, Mississippi, detectives Rust Cohle and Marty Hart unearth a baffling story of double suicide. In the dead of night, the two men are discovered shot to death. Rust Cohle was married, and has two children. Marty Hart was also a cop but has since left, and has no known family. Cohle and Hart, both experienced and trained detectives, are hired by a local attorney, Dora. They are assigned the case. Cohle and Hart consider the men's hands-off motives and the possibility of personal allegiance to a third party. They share a bottle of wine. Cohle collects many odd objects throughout the course of the case. On the bodies, and in the investigators' hotel rooms, police find dark purple marks and hair, and a bloody saxophone case. The case is virtually closed, and the two men return to their respective lives. Art: 0 minutes. HD 12 MB. In the opening title sequence of True Detective, the first words spoken by Matthew McConaughey and Woody Harrelson are, "Not much happens in this town". In a bar that we don't yet know much about, and which we're never shown in the episode, the two men sit down and debate a theory about the case. Their drink order: whiskey, water. At this point in the season, one of the key stories of True Detective is the dysfunctional relationship between Cohle and Hart. Cohle, a former criminal investigator and tough, weathered crime writer, eventually shares with the younger, more idealistic and hardworking Hart details of a case he was supposed to have worked on years ago. He's just not very good at relaying his version of events. His story is only half the story. The other half is Marty. Marty is more idealistic. Marty is excited to be working with Cohle and thinking about the case in a completely different way. But for this
